Foreword

THE CHARTER OF the International Irrigation Management Institute (IIMI) has been revised by the IIMI Board of Governors on several occasions since its approval by the IIMI Support Group in September 1983. The most significant of these revisions occurred as a result of the invitation received by IIMI to join the network of centers supported by the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research (CGIAR) in 1990.

In view of the revisions to the Charter, the Institute has decided to publish a new edition of the "Charter and Founding Documents," the first edition of which was published in 1989. The document includes the Charter of IIMI (as revised by the Board), the 1983 Memorandum of Agreement with the Government of Sri Lanka (signed by the Ford Foundation acting on behalf of the IIMI Support Group), and the International Irrigation Management Institute Act No. 6 of 1985 of the Parliament of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka that established IIMI.

Charter of the International Irrigation Management Institute

WHEREAS the International Irrigation Management Institute Support Group established by and consisting of the countries and organizations listed in Appendix 1 has proposed the establishment of the International Irrigation Management Institute for the purpose of improving the management and performance of irrigation systems in order to ensure the dependability and equity of water distribution, an increase in agricultural production and an overall improvement in the quality of life in rural agricultural communities, while protecting, maintaining and improving the quality of irrigated soil, and of the environment, as well as the health and general welfare of the people concerned:

AND WHEREAS it is proposed that for the attainment of this objective the Institute would sponsor research, education, training and information programs on the management and performance of irrigation systems:

AND WHEREAS the International Irrigation Management Institute Support Group designated the Ford Foundation to act on its behalf in all matters necessary for establishing the Institute:

AND WHEREAS the Government of Sri Lanka and the Ford Foundation, acting on behalf of the International Irrigation Management Institute Support Group, entered into an Agreement dated the first day of September 1983 to work together to establish the Institute with its headquarters in Sri Lanka:

AND WHEREAS, the International Irrigation Management Institute Support Group, meeting in Washington, D.C. on 28th October, 1983 reviewed and expressed its support to the actions taken in implementing its decision made in previous meetings toward the establishment of the International Irrigation Management Institute as an autonomous organization, international in character, including the agreement concluded on September 1, 1983 with the Government of Sri Lanka as the host for the Institute headquarters and the convening of the first meeting of its Governing Board held in Colombo on 20th through 23rd September, 1983 and further expressed its support to the Ford Foundation in framing a constitution embodying the principles, laid out in the agreement, which may serve as the basic guidelines for the Institute's functioning under its Governing Board within Sri Lanka as well as in other countries:

AND WHEREAS on 21 November 1990 the International Irrigation Management Institute was invited to join the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research and on 9 December 1990 accepted this invitation thereby obviating the need for the continued existence of the International Irrigation Management Institute Support Group:

NOW THEREFORE the Institute shall be established as follows:

ACTING ON BEHALF OF THE INTERNATIONAL IRRIGATION MANAGEMENT INSTITUTE
SUPPORT GROUP AND THE GOVERNMENT OF THE DEMOCRATIC SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF SRI LANKA FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF AN INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR RESEARCH AND TRAINING IN IRRIGATION MANAGEMENT

PREAMBLE

The Technical Advisory Committee (TAC) of the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research (CGIAR), after extensive studies over several years, concluded that research and training in irrigation and water management is of the utmost importance, and could be expected to yield very high returns in increasing agricultural production efficiency, reducing the risks of and encouraging the more widespread application of yield increasing technology, and removing constraints limiting food production in the Lesser Developed Countries (LDCs). Very large investments are being made and will continue to be made over at least the next two decades in the development and rehabilitation of irrigation systems. Over 70% of the land area under irrigation is in 22 LDCs and this proportion appears likely to increase. Irrigation now receives by far the largest share of the agricultural investments made for infrastructure to increase farm production. However, the yield increases now being attained from the introduction of irrigation in new areas are disappointing and far below those which seem possible. Much of the reason appears to be a result of deficiencies in management of the systems in a variety of respects.

Irrigation has very large social significance. With good management, it can have an immense positive impact on production and human welfare — increasing output, raising income, employment and wages, and restraining tendencies toward migration to overcrowded urban centers. With inadequate management, it can have serious adverse effects, including waterlogging, increased soil salinity with destruction of the soil's production potential, and spread of water-borne and water-related diseases.

To address these issues, the TAC recommended the establishment of an International Irrigation Management Institute of a somewhat decentralized type, with a modest sized interdisciplinary core management. Such an Institute, with limited capital investment, would be devoted to operational research, coordination, information collection, documentation and exchange, joint analysis and research planning, and staff training, and would work with living irrigation systems operated by national agencies of several co-operating countries for its operating field laboratories, instead of utilizing fixed sedentary experiment stations. Although the CGIAR was not able to undertake the establishment of such an Institute under its own auspices due to its existing financial commitments to the International Agricultural Research Centers for which it had previously assumed responsibility, several CGIAR members and others concluded that the subject was of such great and over-riding importance to the welfare of the LDCs that it should be initiated without delay and that additional arrangements should be made for this purpose.

Thus the International Irrigation Management Institute Support Group, whose initial membership is listed in Section 6 of this Memorandum, was formed. This Support Group has agreed to support the creation of the Institute.

Now therefore, recognizing that research and training in irrigation and water management is of vital importance in that it would encourage, inter alia, the widespread application of yield increasing technology resulting in the yield of high returns in agricultural production, and that the establishment of an International Irrigation Management Institute devoted to operational research, coordination, information collection, documentation and exchange, joint analysis and research planning and staff training could have an immense positive impact on agricultural production and human welfare:

Now, therefore, the parties to this Memorandum agree to work together to establish an International Irrigation Management Institute along the general lines outlined below, with a suitable legal charter and with the status, rights, powers, privileges and other conditions necessary to enable it to operate effectively and efficiently in carrying out its objectives. Specifically, the parties to this Memorandum agree as follows:

1. Name:

The name of the Institute shall be the International Irrigation Management Institute (IIMI).

2. Status:

The parties shall endeavor to ensure that IIMI has an international legal personality.

IIMI shall have under the laws of Sri Lanka the status and legal capacities of a body corporate by the aforesaid name, with power to contract, to acquire and dispose of immovable and movable property, and to institute legal proceedings in that name.

3. Location:

The principal headquarters of IIMI shall be at or near Kandy, Sri Lanka. Provided however the Board in consultation with the Government of Sri Lanka may select any other appropriate place in Sri Lanka for the purpose if it should be mutually determined that such other location would enhance the effectiveness of the Institute towards the attainment of its objectives.

The Institute may if needed establish a liaison office in Colombo and may establish or be provided access to facilities for research and training within irrigation systems in other parts of Sri Lanka. Related co-operating institutions shall be established in such other countries as may be determined to be appropriate and feasible sites. The criteria for determining such feasibility shall include the extent to which a particular country can make contributions toward attainment of the objectives of IIMI's program and the extent to which a particular country, through its association with IIMI, may improve the effectiveness of its own national program. Nations in which major cooperating units are established will normally be expected to endorse and become parties to and subscribe to an agreement embodying the principal objectives and features of this agreement. It is contemplated that other nationals may wish to participate in IIMI's network of co-operative activities in a less formal manner, with several different possible levels of involvement as described more fully in the report of the study team sponsored by CGIAR.

4. Objectives and Activities:

IIMI will serve as a world center or federation of co-operating centers having as its principal objective improvement in the management of irrigation systems. Specifically, IIMI will seek to optimize (a) the effectiveness of water use for agricultural crop production; (b) dependability and equity in distribution of irrigation benefits; (c) the protection, maintenance, and improvement of the environmental quality aspects of irrigation systems, including the water catchment areas, the impoundment, diversion, and distribution systems; (d) the delivery of water to the land, its use by crops, and disposal of excess through drainage systems; and to minimize adverse effects of irrigation systems on human health.

IIMI will be interdisciplinary in character, and its staff shall include individuals highly competent in irrigation engineering, agriculture, the social sciences and management sciences.

IIMI, both at its principal headquarters and through its co-operating units, may engage in the following types of activities:–

- (1) Observation and description of existing irrigation systems and all phases of their operation;
- (2) Analysis of the efficiency and effectiveness of provision of water on a dependable and equitable basis to the crops grown on land in the irrigation system(s);
- (3) Diagnosis of deficiencies in the effectiveness of water use in such areas as design, construction and operation of the delivery systems, methods of regulation of water flow and its partition among farm users or user groups, soil and crop production constraints, water pricing and policies, economic constraints, drainage and incentives for improved management and operation;
- (4) Research aimed at developing improved methodologies for analysis and evaluation of the performance of irrigation systems and devising solutions to alleviate the diagnosed deficiencies in such systems;
- (5) Intervention in the systems aimed at relieving constraints to optimization of water use, and monitoring and analysis of the effects of such intervention;
- (6) Collection, analysis, publication and dissemination of the results of studies conducted on irrigation systems and maintenance of data bases of relevant information on the operation and performance of irrigation systems;
- (7) Organization of periodic workshops among cooperators in the program for exchange of information, evaluation of results, and planning of future work;

When IIMI can function independently under its own Board, the Ford Foundation will endorse this Agreement to the Board of IIMI, and assign to IIMI all the rights, obligations and assets the Ford Foundation has under this Agreement and under its agreement with the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development for undertaking the Initial Stage of IIMI. The Government of Sri Lanka and the Institute shall each choose one member of the tribunal.

The two members thus chosen shall choose a third member who shall be Chairman.

Should the first two members fail to agree upon the Chairman, the latter shall be chosen by the President of the International Court of Justice at the request of one of the members of the tribunal.

The tribunal shall establish its own rules of procedure.

9. Entry into force:

This Agreement shall enter into force on the date of signature.

10. Termination:

The rights and obligations of the Ford Foundation under this Agreement will terminate at the time the Ford Foundation endorses its rights and obligations under this Agreement to IIMI and assigns to IIMI its rights, obligations and the assets it has received under this Agreement and under its agreement with the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development for undertaking the Initial Stage of the Proposal for IIMI.

Should it be necessary to terminate this Agreement for any reason other than an endorsement to IIMI, the disposition of rights, obligations and physical assets, other than land, accrued up to that time shall be determined by the IIMI Support Group. Disposition of any land held by IIMI shall be governed by the terms of the lease agreement for such land.

Consultation with respect to termination or the modification of this Agreement shall be entered into at the request of the Government of Sri Lanka or IIMI. Any such modification shall be the subject of a supplementary Agreement and shall be made by mutual consent.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the undersigned, duly authorized thereto the Ford Foundation on behalf of the International Irrigation Management Institute Support Group and the Government of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka respectively, have signed this Agreement.
